THEMATIC AREAS

CLIMATE CHANGE ADAPTATIONS

CLIMATE CHANGE ADAPTATIONS

With the growing impacts of climate change existing threats to safety and resilience are being significantly exacerbated, tremendously increasing the vulnerability of those already at risk. Areas of particular concern include communities with vulnerable livelihoods, food and environmental insecurity, HIV/AIDS, gender inequalities, weak security and governance, lack of infrastructure and education, and lack of access to appropriate resources and capacities.

Experience has shown that safety and resilience can be addressed most effectively by building communities' capacities to reduce their vulnerabilities to hazards, recognizing that risk is ultimately driven by the combination of the hazard environment and vulnerabilities to those hazards. Without addressing the vulnerability side of the equation, community exposure to natural hazards cannot be reduced in a sustainable way that contributes to resilience. Communities must also be willing to ground their efforts in the broader risk context, otherwise distributional issues between communities may arise.

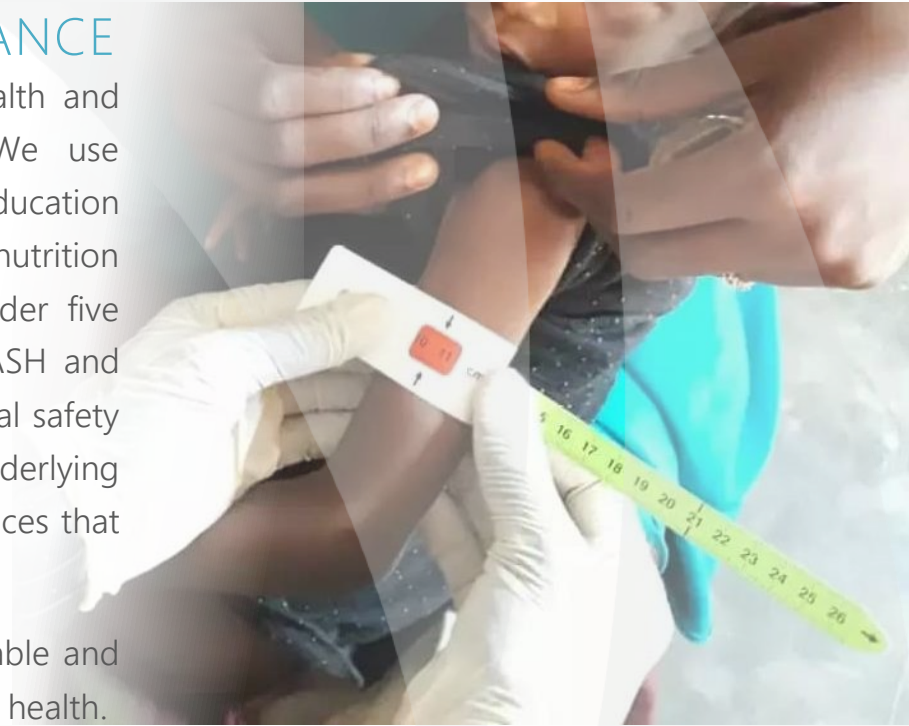

To achieve this, COHF has been in forefront in promoting Climate-Smart Agriculture (CSA) in partnership with FAO & CBOs (Community Based Organizations) in our areas of operation as an integrated approach to managing landscapes—cropland, livestock, forests and fisheries--that address the interlinked challenges of food security and climate change. Besides it promotes establishment and management of tree nurseries and promoting sustainable agroforestry. Agroforestry practices integrate diverse trees or shrubs with crops and livestock. In particular, pastures with trees can sequester five to 10 times more carbon than treeless areas of the same size. Farmers can also be more productive by growing crops and raising livestock simultaneously using significantly less land. Diversifying crops and including livestock on these lands can give farmers additional sources of income and reduce the risks to livelihoods caused by climate change and unpredictable weather

HUMANITARIAN EMERGENCY AND RELIEF

HEALTH, NUTRITION AND SUSTENANCE

COHF endeavors to strengthen access to maternal health and nutrition services to the vulnerable communities. We use internationally recognized community-based peer education platform to build community capacity to address undernutrition and other key causes of mortality among children under five years. COHF also links with other sectors, including WASH and Food Security & Livelihoods intervention focusing on social safety nets, care for child development (CCD) to address the underlying causes of poor health in order to improve hygiene practices that reduce cognitive underdevelopment and undernutrition.

COHF health program provides treatment of communicable and non-communicable diseases as well as Maternal and child health.

WATER, SANITATION AND HYGIENE

Water, sanitation, and hygiene (WASH) are critically important for communities affected by disaster and conflict. COHF works to improve hygiene practices and increase access to safe, sustainable water and sanitation services. COHF helps families to gain equitable access to safe water through rehabilitation and installation of water systems that meet family and livelihood needs.

COHF also trains Water User Committee members and caretakers from the local community to operate, and maintain these water systems. This helps to ensure that the water systems are serviceable every time and regularly thereafter

FOOD AND NON-FOOD ITEM ASSISTANCE

COHF delivers food and non-food items assistance to communities affected by food insecurity. Our food assistance programming includes population-wide distributions, school feeding and nutrition support. We respond directly or through support from our partners. COHF also considers the use of cash transfers as a modality to provide timely and relevant assistance, as well as enabling people with purchasing flexibility

PROTECTION OF VULNERABLE VICTIMS

COHF works in some of the most volatile areas of Kenya and Somaliland to protect victims of violence. We are committed to creating and maintaining an environment which promotes core value of human dignity and prevents abuse.

To ensure that we hold ourselves to the utmost standards, we have rigorous systems in place to ensure that community members can report harassment and safeguarding concerns, protected from the threat of retaliation. In partnership with the local authorities and our affiliates we conduct thorough assessment which may include investigation leading to appropriate action by the appropriate local authorities.

COHF is helping communities in Somaliland to recover from natural disasters and conflict to generate income by rehabilitating their productive assets and enhancing their resilience. Our group-based approach that is gender responsive and conflict sensitive, COHF engages young men and women on cash for works as the preferred alternative livelihood option. The approach helps locals build sustainable livelihoods through a phased process of recovery, rebuilding and long-term growth.

Our approach also promotes systemic change where we support improving the existing infrastructures such as water catchments to improve water security and building other extension sustainable setups such as contour bands to mitigate soil erosion.

AGRICULTURAL INPUTS DISTRIBUTION

COHF assists vulnerable agricultural communities in Somaliland to pull through from natural disasters, restore their productive lands and engage with markets on equitable terms. We support the transfer of new and improved agricultural practices by providing access to seeds, tools, trainings and extension services.

Our line of initiative helps vulnerable pastoralists through provision of livestock inputs such as Mazzicans and animals feed blocks. Livestock owners also gain access to veterinary services through our well trained, equipped and supervised Community Animal Health staff.

Through an innovative program, our field officers provide technical and extension services to herders, while also building their technical and management capacity. This helps vulnerable pastoral communities transition from dependence on emergency relief to engaging in a vital role in their recovery and prosperity.

We also support the Fishery groups by providing access to cash transfers, modern tools and extension services to enhance fish quality and group earnings hence helping them switch from dependence on emergency relief to engaging in sustainable economic activities.

Through this initiative also, our field staffs provide practical and supervisory services to fishery groups while enhancing their technical capacity, coping mechanisms and mitigating the effect of climate change.

WADATASHI IYO HORUMAAR ('let's talk, dialogue and succeed together')

In June 2022, COHF partnered with; Focus Women Foundation (the funding partner) to implement a livelihood support project in Eastleigh, Nairobi. The project objective is to enhance households' income of marginalized women through Income generating activities (IGAs) and capacity building on access to basic social services rights in Eastleigh, Nairobi Kenya with the primary target groups being vulnerable women living in Eastleigh, widows and women heading households.

The project envisages the following results:

- Increased and more consistent household income and improved employment opportunities for women and girls. The efforts aid in revealing the reality and magnitude of the crimes along with a demographic profile of vulnerable communities as well as to express the need for a high level inter-state coordination and multi-sectoral approach to address the issue. Additionally, we always conduct sensitization workshops for the media, public transport actors, law enforcers, judges, prosecutors and Child Welfare Committee members to equip them with the requisite understanding and skills to effectively handle cases of human trafficking.

WOMEN/ YOUTH EMPOWERMENT, PEACE BUILDING & GOVERNANCE

WOMEN AND YOUTH EMPOWERMENT

This program empowers and creates a space for women, and youth to advocate for their rights and strengthen their social organizations. The also program focuses on women's economic and political empowerment, their reproductive health rights concentrating on FGM and teenage pregnancy.

In addition, the program promotes women and youth in combating violence extremism with focus on the prevention measure

On cross cutting themes we enhance Protection through conducting Research on Community Behavior Change & Communication (CBCC) and by conducting Capacity building to Communities and State Agencies.

PEACE BUILDING AND SOCIAL GOVERNANCE

COHF believes that peacebuilding and social governance are related, the lack of former makes the latter impossible to realize and vice versa. Therefore, COHF tries to initiate sustainable development projects in tandem with its peacebuilding efforts. COHF supports communities to reconnect and build resilience in the face of the catastrophic impact of conflict-related trauma. Social cohesion requires more than the absence of conflict. It calls for the reknitting of social ties severed by violence.

COHF integrates trauma awareness, stress management and social cohesion training into livelihoods activities. This helps to build the ability of individuals to manage stress and reduce conflict.

PARTICIPATORY ACTION RESEARCH

OUR APPROACH TO LEVERAGING RESEARCH FOR ENHANCED HUMANITARIAN RESPONSE

OUR APPROACH

PROJECT DESIGN AND IMPLEMENTATION:

COHF adopts a participatory and consultative approach to project design and implementation. Each project commences with a thorough needs assessment. This is aimed at understanding the community needs so as to facilitate implementation of programs that address those needs as appropriate. The community and the local administrative structures are involved in projects designing and implementation to create an ownership of the projects for sustainability at all levels.

During the project implementation, community mobilization and sensitization is an on-going process throughout the projects circle and the local community actively participates in the entire processes and in this way, it builds the local community's capacity to initiate, implement, monitor, evaluate and sustain the projects.

MONITORING AND EVALUATION:

COHF has a robust M&E framework that clearly indicates goals, outputs and outcome inbuilt in each project before the commencement of a project and assigns responsibilities to specific staffs in the organization.

COHF uses the USAID and UN monitoring and evaluation toolkits as guideline in its M&E approach. Each project is designed to include pre-project monitoring, mid-level monitoring during the project and an end line evaluation at the end of each project.

Each project & activity seeks to incorporate the objectives of the National Government, donors, beneficiaries, and COHF. This all- inclusive approach ensures that all parties are involved in the M&E process. Reports are generated to document the progress and are acted upon appropriately. This M&E process will evaluate project progress, resource utilization, sustainability & level of community involvement & contribution.

MAINSTREAMING CLIMATE CHANGE ADAPTATION

COHF mainstreams climate change adaptation in all her programs and projects. The Climate Mainstreaming adaptation entails integrating climate risks and actions into development planning across all our thematic areas and from the national to the grassroots level. This is essential for making development more resilient to climate change. One of our major achievements is ensuring continued build the capacity of our beneficiaries on Good Agronomic Practices and Agroforestry among other climate smart farming practices. Of great significance is training the farmers, communities and institutions in our areas of operation on tree nurseries establishment and management, tree planting to enhance vegetation cover as a major way to mitigate climate change and the adverse effects of global warming. INSPIRATIONAL SUCCESS STORIES

We selected a few testimonials from beneficiaries that have inspired us to strive even more to attain our objective; to promote empowerment, sustainability and resilience to issues affecting the vulnerable members of the communities

"Since I was selected as one of the beneficiaries of this fisheries project, my life and that of my family has tremendously improved. With the monthly cash I have been receiving, I have bought appropriate fishing tools that have enhanced my source of livelihood.

I am also more informed on how to better handle fish and how to preserve them. Secondly before I forget, I would like to thank Candle of Hope Foundation for teaching us how to cook fish properly and the importance of nutritious and healthy meals.

I believe that right now I can no longer depend on handouts for survival"

- Warsame Ismaciil Axmed - Berbera, Somaliland

"I was practicing Nomadic pastoralism before this livestock project intervention. Almost all of my animals died due to prolonged drought and water scarcity and animal feeds. As a result, I had debts that I had incurred to purchase food. After the intervention, my animals' health improved due to the supplement feeding because of using range cubes that I received. My animals were dewormed, they have improved in their health and I hardly experienced death in my animals. Thanks to this project for I acquired knowledge and skills on nutrition and food safety. I am also able to handle milk well and reduce chances of its contamination. I met my short-term food needs through the cash transfers that I received from FAO directly to my phone. Thank you so much for this intervention"

- Maryan Cilm Muuse - Tuulo Barwaaqo, Somaliland

"Prior to the intervention, I had lost most of my livestock to diseases. Since it's our only source of livelihood, my family was left in a crumbling state: my children were unable to go to school due to lack of school fees whereas also due to food shortage and proper healthcare, they became weak and malnourished. However, since the beginning of the project, we have received livestock inputs, nutrition trainings and cash interventions. I believe that I'm now more resilient and the animals' health has also improved since they were dewormed and supplied with feeder supplements.

We are so grateful."

- Adna Hindi Nuur - Berbera, Somaliland

"Being of Somali origin it's not easy to be a woman, it's a great responsibility and commitment to be a mother, it's a challenge to be an exemplary child, you need compassion to be a sister and it's a sacrifice to demand your rights! I went through all this in my life, which has had its challenges, but I found the strength to succeed.

The development of women's entrepreneurship in urban areas is an opportunity for the economic empowerment of women. Entrepreneurship offers a woman the opportunity to fight for herself, to be strong and to be independent

I stay in Eastleigh and I am a mother of 6 children and a widow. Eastleigh is a neighbourhood in Nairobi, Kenya. It is located east of the central business district. It is known for its business prowess, as well as "its poor infrastructure. Eastleigh is almost entirely inhabited by Somalis, except for a few indigenous residents. The suburb's commercial sector is likewise dominated by Somalis, with most if not all businesses owned by the Somali community. Somalis have invested heavily in the enclave.

Businesses in the suburb range from small stalls to shopping malls and night lodges, and all feature Somali names such as Tawakal, Mogadishu, Qaran and Halal. Products are typically imported from Mogadishu and Dubai, and include designer clothing, jewellery and even camel milk. Starting in late 2012, a mass exodus of Somali residents was reported after a prolonged period of harassment by the Kenyan police and public. Hundreds of Somali entrepreneurs withdrew their savings from their bank accounts, with the intention of reinvesting most of that money back home in Somalia. The collective departures most affected Eastleigh's real estate sector, as landlords struggled to find Kenyans able to afford the high rates of the apartments and shops vacated by the Somalis.

Lack of information and skills, administration, infrastructure and harassment by the city councils officials, lack of capital are some of the obstacles I encountered as a beginner in business. I needed to master the market trends and dynamics in Eastleigh, communication, to deal with customers, be ready to respond to the demands of doing a small business in an environment dominated by heavy investors in the malls and stalls.

Thanks to Candle of Hope Foundation, through the project "Waadatashi Iyo Hoorumar" whose objectives are Increased and more consistent household income and improved employment opportunities for women and girls and increased access to financial services, basic rights and justice for the women and girls.

Since inception of the project in June, we have been organized in groups of 10 women per group and the progress has been impressive. From the on-going trainings on group formation, dynamics and governance, we have improved significantly in conducting our group business than before. We have embraced technology and we have formed whatsapp groups that include and accommodate every one of us. We share our concerns, challenges, fears and problems we are facing as a family where we feel more fulfilled and satisfied. I am planning future investments to improve our camel meat production, diversify our fruits and vegetable selling businesses that in next phase we do not depend on anyone. I work as much as I can and when I can. I have the full support of my family. It is not an easy job, especially during this time Kenya has been going through the electioneering period amid COVID-19 effects, but I have a strong will and when you love your job you can find time for everything.

I want to tell all women from our groups and of Somali origin that they should fight for themselves use all the opportunities that are given to them, become independent and improve their financial situation. It is a special satisfaction when you can prove to yourself and also to others that you can make life better.

In addition to the business, I want to highlight the fact of being active in the civil sector: by becoming members of the business community as women association which brings us together. When we are together we fight for the economic betterment of women, for preserving cultural heritage, for promoting our region, for preserving old crafts, etc. Membership in associations is very important for us as women because it gives us the opportunity to spend time together, to go to fairs together, to promote our own products, to exchange experiences and to learn from one another."

- Sahara Abdi, 53 years - Horyaal women group leader, Eastleigh Nairobi
